

SUCRE

Our wine list is a story of immigration. Just like the Italians, French and Spanish who came to Argentina to swap secrets with a new land, it makes the trip from Old World to New. Tracing the mingling of influences, and letting wines with European roots live next to bottles that are purely South American in origin.

The first grapes on South American soil were Listán Prieto and Muscatel de Alexandre, planted by travelling Jesuits on their way down the Andes. In 1566, a Chilean Friar called Juan Cedron crossed the mountains and established a vineyard in Argentina. Over the next 300 years, hoisted on the shoulders of the portenos who carried products on and off the ships, these vines grew (and grew and grew) all the way to Patagonia in the far South. In the 19th century, new arrivals from Italy, Spain and France brought an abundance of new grapes that reinvented themselves in the high altitudes and southern latitudes of the Andes.

SPANISH CONNECTION

The arrival of grape varieties to Argentina came with the many Jesuits who populated the Andean regions during the 16th century. Listán Prieto (Criolla Chica), from the Canary Islands and later Muscatel de Alexandria were the staple varieties for over 300 years. Both of these varieties crossed, spawning a series of indigenous varieties, mostly pink, known today as the Criollas. Torrontes, Moscatel Blanco and Pedro Gimenez (no relation to Pedro Ximenez from Spain) dominate the white Criolla varieties from Argentina.

ITALIAN CONNECTION

A cursory look at many of the wine labels from Argentina will tell you where much of Argentina's wine influence comes from. Mass immigration of Italians in the late 19th and early 20th century drastically changed the shape and culture of Argentina, and remains the dominant influence in gastronomy and much of its culture, bringing great expertise and skill to the wine industry of Mendoza and beyond.

FRENCH CONNECTION

The arrival of Michel Pouget to Mendoza in 1853, who went on to form the Quinta Nomal (wine school), along with cuttings from 100 French grape varieties, changed the winemaking landscape for ever. French varieties still dominate the fine wine tradition, with Chardonnay, Chenin Blanc and Semillón dominating the French white varieties grown in Argentina.
